

ENCYCLOPEDIA OF
RELIGION
SECOND EDITION

TRANSCENDENTAL
MEDITATION
•
ZWINGLI,
HULDRYCH

LINDSAY JONES
EDITOR IN CHIEF

MACMILLAN REFERENCE USA

An imprint of Thomson Gale, a part of The Thomson Corporation

THOMSON
—★—
GALE

Encyclopedia of Religion, Second Edition

Lindsay Jones, Editor in Chief

© 2005 Thomson Gale, a part of The Thomson Corporation.

Thomson, Star Logo and Macmillan Reference USA are trademarks and Gale is a registered trademark used herein under license.

For more information, contact
Macmillan Reference USA
An imprint of Thomson Gale
27500 Drake Rd.
Farmington, Hills, MI 48331-3535
Or you can visit our Internet site at <http://www.gale.com>

ALL RIGHTS RESERVED

No part of this work covered by the copyright hereon may be reproduced or used in any form or by any means—graphic, electronic, or mechanical, including photocopying, recording, taping, Web distribution, or information storage retrieval systems—without the written permission of the publisher.

For permission to use material from this product, submit your request via Web at <http://www.gale-edit.com/permissions>, or you may download our Permissions Request form and submit your request by fax or mail to:

Permissions
Thomson Gale
27500 Drake Rd.
Farmington Hills, MI 48331-3535
Permissions Hotline:
248-699-8006 or 800-877-4253 ext. 8006
Fax: 248-699-8074 or 800-762-4058

Since this page cannot legibly accommodate all copyright notices, the acknowledgments constitute an extension of the copyright notice.

While every effort has been made to ensure the reliability of the information presented in this publication, Thomson Gale does not guarantee the accuracy of the data contained herein. Thomson Gale accepts no payment for listing; and inclusion in the publication of any organization, agency, institution, publication, service, or individual does not imply endorsement of the editors or publisher. Errors brought to the attention of the publisher and verified to the satisfaction of the publisher will be corrected in future editions.

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS CATALOGING-IN-PUBLICATION DATA

Encyclopedia of religion / Lindsay Jones, editor in chief.—2nd ed.
p. cm.

Includes bibliographical references and index.
ISBN 0-02-865733-0 (SET HARDCOVER : ALK. PAPER) —
ISBN 0-02-865734-9 (v. 1) — ISBN 0-02-865735-7 (v. 2) —
ISBN 0-02-865736-5 (v. 3) — ISBN 0-02-865737-3 (v. 4) —
ISBN 0-02-865738-1 (v. 5) — ISBN 0-02-865739-X (v. 6) —
ISBN 0-02-865740-3 (v. 7) — ISBN 0-02-865741-1 (v. 8) —
ISBN 0-02-865742-X (v. 9) — ISBN 0-02-865743-8 (v. 10)
— ISBN 0-02-865980-5 (v. 11) — ISBN 0-02-865981-3 (v.
12) — ISBN 0-02-865982-1 (v. 13) — ISBN 0-02-865983-X
(v. 14) — ISBN 0-02-865984-8 (v. 15)
1. RELIGION—ENCYCLOPEDIAS. I. JONES, LINDSAY, 1954-

BL31.E46 2005
200'.3—dc22

2004017052

This title is also available as an e-book.

ISBN 0-02-865997-X

Contact your Thomson Gale representative for ordering information.

Printed in the United States of America
10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1

- Boyce, Mary. Zoroastrianism: Its Antiquity and Constant Vigour. Costa Mesa, Calif., 1992.
- Gnoli, Gherardo. Zoroaster's Time and Homeland: A Study on the Origins of Mazdaism and Related Problems. Naples, 1980.
- Gnoli, Gherardo. Zoroaster in History. New York, 2000.
- Kellens, Jean. Essays on Zarathustra and on Zoroastrianism. Costa Mesa, Calif., 2000.
- Lommel, Herman. Die Religion Zarathustras: Nach dem Awesta dargestellt. Tübingen, Germany, 1930.
- Molé, Marijan. Culte, mythe, et cosmologie dans l'Iran ancien: Le problème zoroastrien et la tradition mazdéenne. Paris, 1963.
- Schlerath, Bernfried, ed. Zarathustra. Darmstadt, 1970.
- Skjaervø, Prods Oktor. "The State of Old Avestan Scholarship." JAOS 117 (1997): 103–114.

Studies of the Image of Zarathustra in Zoroastrian and Non-Zoroastrian Traditions

- De Jong, Albert. Traditions of the Magi: Zoroastrianism in Greek and Latin Literature. Leiden, 1997.
- Molé, Marijan. La légende de Zoroastre selon les textes pehlevi. Paris, 1967.
- Rose, Jenny. The Image of Zoroaster: The Persian Mage through European Eyes. New York, 2000.
- Stausberg, Michael, ed. Faszination Zarathustra: Zoroaster und die europäische Religionsgeschichte der Frühen Neuzeit. Berlin, 1998.

Zoroastrian Works on Zarathustra

There are many modern Zoroastrian studies of Zarathustra and his importance for the Zoroastrian tradition. Most of these appear in Persian or Gujarati. Some representative examples are:

- Dhalla, Maneckji Nusservanji. Zoroastrian Theology. New York, 1914.
- Kapadia, Shapurji Aspandiarji. The Teachings of Zoroaster and the Philosophy of the Parsi Religion. London, 1905.
- Mehr, Farhang. The Zoroastrian Tradition: An Introduction to the Ancient Wisdom of Zarathustra. Costa Mesa, Calif., 2003.
- Mistree, Khojeste. Zoroastrianism: An Ethnic Perspective. Bombay, 1982.
- Nanavutty, Piloo. The Gathas of Zarathustra: Hymns in Praise of Wisdom. Ahmadabad, 1999.
- Taraporewala, Irach Jehangir Sorabji. The Divine Songs of Zarathustra. Bombay, 1951.

ALBERT DE JONG (2005)

ZĀWIYAH SEE KHĀNAGĀH

ZAYNAB BINT 'ALĪ (c. AH 5–62; 626/7–682 CE), daughter of 'Alī ibn Abī Ṭālib and Fāṭimah al-Zahrā', was the first granddaughter of the prophet Muḥammad. She is best known for her courageous and eloquent role supporting her brother, the second Shī'ah Imām Ḥusayn, at the time of his martyrdom in the Battle of Karbala, and for protecting his family in the following months of Umayyad imprisonment.

LIFE. Zaynab was born in Medina a few years after Muḥammad's immigration thereto in the early days of Sha'bān of the year AH 5 (626 or 627 CE). She was the third child born to 'Alī and Fāṭimah—after Ḥasan (the first Shī'ah imām) and Ḥusayn—with about a year's interval between each child. Her birth was followed by that of a sister, Umm Kulthūm. Tradition states that Zaynab was named by Muḥammad, who attributed her name to divine inspiration.

Little is known of her early life. Muḥammad died when she was about five, followed by Fāṭimah a few months later. She married her paternal cousin 'Abd Allāh (whose father was 'Alī's brother Ja'far al-Ṭayyār ibn Abī Ṭālib, and whose mother was then 'Alī's wife and hence Zaynab's own stepmother, Asmā' ibn 'Umays). Zaynab is reported to have had five children with 'Abd Allāh: 'Alī (known as 'Alī al-Zaynabī, whose numerous descendants took pride in tracing their lineage to Zaynab), 'Awn al-Akbar (killed at Karbala), Abbās (no information about him), Muḥammad (possibly killed at Karbala), and one daughter named Umm Kulthūm (married to her paternal cousin Qāsim ibn Muḥammad ibn Ja'far ibn Abī Ṭālib, after rejecting the suit of the Umayyad Yazīd ibn Mu'āwiya).

When Zaynab's father 'Alī became caliph in 656 and moved his capital from Medina to Kūfah, Zaynab and 'Abd Allāh accompanied him there. She lived in Kūfah through four years of military confrontations with the insurgent governor of Syria, Mu'āwiya ibn Abī Sufyān, and with the Iraqi Kharijite rebels, until 'Alī was killed in 661 by one of the latter. She was then thirty-five years old.

Zaynab is mentioned a few times in the accounts of 'Alī's caliphate as a devoted and beloved daughter. Moreover, it is reported that 'Alī taught her a devotional poem that she often recited, and that she herself taught Qur'ān interpretation to women in her house in Kūfah. It is thus likely that she was trained by her father (who is considered the most learned of sages), and that she herself played a teaching role among the women of the early Muslim community.

After 'Alī's death, his son Ḥasan stepped down from the caliphate and Mu'āwiya became the first Umayyad caliph. Ḥasan returned to Medina with the family, and was subsequently poisoned by Mu'āwiya in 669. There are reports of Zaynab's caring attendance on Ḥasan during his last few days.

Ḥasan was followed as head of the Prophet's family by his brother Ḥusayn. In 680, Mu'āwiya died, having appointed his son Yazīd to the caliphate. At that time—according to some sources, after consulting with Zaynab—Ḥusayn refused to pledge allegiance to Yazīd, and set off with his family and supporters for Mecca and then Kūfah to meet up with his Kūfan supporters and overthrow Yazīd. Some of Ḥusayn's well-wishers tried to dissuade him from going, and these included Zaynab's husband 'Abd Allāh (who had by then lost his sight, according to some sources), but when Ḥusayn remained adamant, 'Abd Allāh sent Zaynab and his two sons 'Awn and Muḥammad with him (there is conflicting evidence regarding whether this Muḥammad was 'Abd Allāh's son from Zaynab or another wife).

En route to Kūfah, Ḥusayn's entourage was stopped at Karbala and surrounded by a military unit sent by the Umayyad governor of Kūfah, 'Ubayd Allāh ibn Ziyād. On 10 Muḥarram 61 (680), after three days without food or water in the scorching desert, Ḥusayn, his supporters, all but one of the men from his family, and many of the male children were slaughtered. They were reported to be seventy-two in number, including the family members, who numbered eighteen. 'Awn and Muḥammad were among those killed, according to some reports, encouraged by their mother to fight in defense of their uncle. Zaynab was then fifty-four years old. Her grief-filled speeches are recorded by many historians.

After the massacre, the Umayyad army looted Ḥusayn's camp and set off with his women and children for the court of Ibn Ziyād. Upon reaching Kūfah, Zaynab, with the other women, was paraded unveiled and shackled through the very town where her father had ruled, with the heads of Ḥusayn and his companions raised on spears beside them. Ibn Ziyād then ordered the execution of Ḥusayn's only remaining son, the 23-year-old 'Alī Zayn al-'Ābidīn (the third Shī'ah imām); Zaynab protected his life saying Ibn Ziyād would have to kill her before he killed 'Alī, which shamed him into withdrawing the execution order. A moving oration delivered by Zaynab in Kūfah is recorded in some sources. The prisoners were next sent to the court of the Umayyad caliph Yazīd in Damascus, where one of his Syrian followers asked for Ḥusayn's daughter Fāṭimah al-Kubrā, and once again it was Zaynab who came to the rescue and protected her honor. The family remained in Yazīd's prison for a time; the sources do not specify the number of days or months. The first assembly (majlis) of mourning for Ḥusayn is said to have been held by Zaynab in prison. In Damascus, too, she is reported to have delivered a poignant oration.

Zaynab and her family were eventually released and escorted back to Medina. After her return to Medina, little is known of her in the year and a half before her death, except through much later, conflicting reports. According to one report, she stayed and died there. Another report states that due to persecution from the governor of Medina, she traveled to Fustat (later Cairo) in Egypt with several other women from the family of the Prophet; she lived in Fustat for over a year, narrating the Karbala tragedy and preaching the love of the family of the Prophet, and died there. A third report states that she went with her husband to his Syrian estates in a year of drought and died there. Sources also differ as to the year of her death. According to most of them, she died on 15 Rajab AH 62 (682 CE), when she was fifty-six years old.

ROLE IN MUSLIM PIETY. Zaynab is best remembered for her role in Karbala. Through the centuries, she has continued to hold a prominent place in Muḥarram orations, as well as in lamentation poetry composed in Arabic, Persian, Urdu, and other languages commemorating the Karbala tragedy. She is portrayed in these variously as an object of pity, a compassionate saint, and a powerful intercessor. On a somewhat more militant note, she was used in pre-revolution Iran as a model for inspiring political opposition among women—in the Iranian revolution of 1979, female commandos came to be known as "the commandos of her holiness Zaynab" (Komāndo-hāye Hazrat-e Zaynab).

Every day, hundreds of Muslim men and women, but especially women, visit the mausoleums dedicated to Zaynab in Damascus and Cairo. In fact, some scholars call Zaynab the patron saint of Muslim women. At the shrine, visitors ask for her help (madad), and they beseech her intercession (shafa'a) with God on their behalf for a myriad of petitions, such as curing illness, passing school examinations, or finding a good husband or wife for themselves or their children. Many miracles are attributed to her, such as the curing of chronic illness. Mostly Shī'ah visit the Damascus shrine, and Egyptian Sunnīs of a Ṣūfī bent visit the Cairo shrine, where tens of thousands celebrate Zaynab's birthday (mawlid) for seven days annually.

Zaynab is known by several titles. She is called Zaynab al-Kubrā (the senior Zaynab) to distinguish her from Zaynab al-Ṣuḡhrā (the junior Zaynab, the name of her full sister, Umm Kulthūm, and also perhaps of another half-sister). Zaynab is called al-'Aqīla (literally, "secluded one," or "pearl," perhaps connected to a suggested etymology of her name: zayn + ab, "adornment of father"), as well as Thānī-ye Zahrā' (the second Fāṭimah Zahrā'). In Egypt she is known as al-Ṭāhirah (the pure one) and by a number of "mother" epithets (Umm Hāshim, mother of the Prophet's family; Umm al-'awājiz, mother of the weak; Umm al-masākīn, mother of the poor; Umm al-yatāmā, mother of the orphans; and Umm Miṣr, mother of Egypt). She is also known simply as al-Sayyida (the Lady), a fitting title for a woman who came to be considered a role model for Muslim women, typifying courage, fortitude, leadership, eloquence, devotion, and faith.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

The primary source of information on the Karbala tragedy, and of Zaynab's role in it, is the account of the Umayyad author Abū Mikhnaf Lūṭ ibn Yahyā preserved in the early medieval historical works; Abū Mikhnaf's original work Maqatal al-Ḥusayn (The killing of al-Ḥusayn) is probably lost, and the various manuscripts and editions thereof are most likely reworked and corrupted versions (see Ursula Sezgin, Abū Miḥnaf: Ein Beitrag zur Historiographie der umayyadischen Zeit, Leiden, 1971, pp. 116–123). Much of the original Abū Mikhnaf account rendered by al-Ṭabarī is found in English translation in The History of al-Ṭabarī: An Annotated Translation, vol. 19, The Caliphate of Yazīd b. Mu'awiyah, translated by I. K. A. Howard (Albany, N.Y., 1990). Al-Balādhurī also narrates the Karbala tragedy on Abū Mikhnaf's authority in Ansāb al-Ashraf, vol. 2, edited by M. B. al-Maḥmūdī (Beirut, 1977). The text of Zaynab's Damascus oration is recorded by the early scholar Aḥmad ibn Abī Tāhir Tayfūr in his Kitāb Balāghāt al-nisā', edited by 'Abd al-Ḥamīd Hindāwī (Cairo, 1998, pp. 70–73). A book devoted to the Karbala tragedy that includes the texts of Zaynab's Küfah and Damascus orations (pp. 56–57, 69–71) is al-Lubūf fi qasṣā al-ṭufūf (Beirut, 1992) by the later medieval historian Ibn Ṭāwūs al-Ḥusaynī, who also bases his narrative on Abū Mikhnaḥ's authority.

In European languages, there are no monographs about Zaynab's life. There is one anthropological study of her birthday celebrations in Cairo and the rituals associated with visiting her shrine: Nadia Abu Zahra, The Pure and Powerful: Studies in Contemporary Muslim Society (Berkshire, U.K., and Ithaca, N.Y., 1997). There are also several articles about various aspects of Zaynab's role in Muslim piety, including David Pinault, "Zaynab bint Alī and the Place of the Women of the Households of the First Imāms in Shi'ite Devotional Literature," in Women in the Medieval Islamic World: Power, Patronage, and Piety, edited by Gavin Hambly (New York, 1998), pp. 69–98; Diane D'Souza, "The Figure of Zaynab in Shi'i Devotional Life," Bulletin of the Henry Martyn Institute of Islamic Studies 17, no. 1 (1998): pp. 31–53; Andreas D'Souza, "'Zaynab I Am Coming!': The Transformative Power of Nawḥah," Bulletin of the Henry Martyn Institute of Islamic Studies 16, nos. 3 and 4 (1997): 83–94; Anna Madoeuf, "Quand le temps revele l'espace: Les fetes de Ḥusayn et de Zaynab au Caire," Geographie et Cultures 21 (1997): 71–92; Irene Calzoni, "Shi'ite Mausoleums in Syria with Particular Reference to Sayyida Zaynab's Mausoleum," Convegno sul tema la Shi'ia nell'Impero Ottomano (Rome, 1993): 191–201; and Valerie J. Hoffman-Ladd, "Devotion to the Prophet and His Family in Egyptian Sufism," International Journal of Middle Eastern Studies 24 (1992): 615–637.

In Arabic, there are several monographs about the life of Zaynab, and these also address the issue of her burial place with differing conclusions. These include: Ḥasan Mūsā Ṣaffār, al-Mar'a al-Aẓīma: Qirā'a fi Ḥayāt al-Sayyida Zaynab bint 'Alī (London and Beirut, 2000); Aḥmad Shukr al-Ḥusaynī, al-Shams al-Ṭāl i'a wa al-Anwār al-Sā'i'a: Aqīlat al-Imāma wa al-Wilāya al-Sayyida Zaynab al-Kubrā (Beirut, 1999); Muḥammad Ḥasanayn al-Sābiqī, Marqad al-'Aqīla Zaynab (Beirut, 1979); and 'Alī Aḥmad Shalabī, Ibnat al-Zahra' Baṭalat Karbalā' Zaynab raḍīya Allāh 'anhā (Cairo, 1972). An encyclopedia entry on Zaynab is provided by Ḥasan al-Amīn in his A'yān al-Shi'a, vol. 7 (Beirut, 1983), pp. 137–142.

B. TAHERA QUTBUDDIN (2005)

ZEALOTS. The Zealots were Jewish revolutionaries in first-century Israel whose religious zeal led them to fight to the death against Roman domination and to attack or kill other Jews who collaborated with the Romans. Scholars disagree as to whether the name Zealots designated all revolutionary groups of the first century or only one of the factions active during the Roman-Jewish War of 66–70 CE. Josephus Flavius (37–c. 100 CE.), the Jewish general who surrendered to the Romans and whose official Roman history of the war furnishes the major source, is ambiguous in his use of terminology. References in the New Testament, the Pseudepigraphy, and the rabbinic literature add to the confusion.

In 6 CE, Judah (Yehudah) the Galilean showed zeal for God's law and land when he led a revolt against the Roman census in Judaea. He and his followers fought to cleanse the land by taking vengeance against Jews who cooperated with the Romans. Judah considered such cooperation to be idolatrous recognition of a lord (Caesar) other than God. By such vengeance, he and his followers sought to appease God, who would thereby honor their cause against the Romans. The revolt failed, but Judah had originated the so-called Fourth Philosophy ("No Lord but God") based on the first commandment. Judah's descendents emerged again after all of Judaea became a Roman province in 44 CE. Their subsequent revolutionary actions against the corrupt and incompetent Roman authorities contributed to the outbreak of war in 66 CE. Josephus usually refers to Judah's group as Sicarii, after the sikkah ("dagger") used in assassinations.

Although Josephus refers to Judah's faction as a Jewish sect, it is not clear that his group is to be identified with a revolutionary faction called the Zealots or indeed that there was such an organized group early in the first century. Many Jews venerated "zealous action" as a model of piety, using the biblical figure Phineas as a prototype (Num 25:1–15). Such persons endured persecution for the Law or sought to destroy those who violated the Law as a means to cleanse the land of defilement and thereby turn back God's wrath. Individuals, such as Simon the "zealot" (a disciple of Jesus: Luke 6:15; Acts 1:13), were zealous for God over a variety of legal issues. Sometimes, as was the case with the Maccabean revolt in 167–142 BCE, zeal was a dominant motivation for revolution. However, not all zealots were revolutionaries, and not all revolutionaries were motivated by zeal. It is not until his account of the war period that Josephus refers to one of the wartime revolutionary groups formally as "the Zealots."

Amid the growing unrest in the decades leading up to the war, there was broad resistance to Roman occupation, including protests against provocative actions by the procurator Pilate (ruled 26–36 CE), a threatened strike against raising crops for the Romans when the emperor Gaius Caligula sought to put a statue of Zeus in the Temple (41 CE), riots at feast time in Jerusalem in reaction to offenses by Roman soldiers, official delegations to Rome protesting inept procurators, prophetic actions and oracular pronouncements by apocalyptic figures, banditry, kidnappings, and assassinations. Resistance to Roman rule was widespread and cut across all sectors of society. The war broke out in 66 CE when the procurator Florus tried to seize money from the Temple treasury, after which the populace drove Florus out of Jerusalem and successfully held off Cestius Gallus, the Legate of Syria, when he arrived to restore Roman order. The Jewish declaration of war came when the lower priests ceased the sacrifices to God on behalf of the emperor. Subsequently, the traditional high priests assumed control of the wartime government and prepared for the Romans to return.

- COUNCILS: BUDDHIST COUNCILS
(1987)
- Riv-Ellen Prell
University of Minnesota, Twin Cities
MYERHOFF, BARBARA G. (1987 AND 2005)
- Hanns J. Prem
Ludwig-Maximilians-Universität München
TOLTEC RELIGION (1987)
- John Prest
Balliol College, University of Oxford GARDENS: AN OVERVIEW (1987 AND 2005)
- James J. Preston
State University of New York, College at Oneonta
GODDESS WORSHIP: AN OVERVIEW
(1987)
GODDESS WORSHIP: THEORETICAL
PERSPECTIVES (1987)
PURIFICATION: AN OVERVIEW (1987)
- Eleanor M. Preston-Whyte
University of Natal
ZULU RELIGION (1987)
- Richard Price
Johns Hopkins University
AFRO-SURINAMESE RELIGIONS (1987)
- Simon Price
University of Oxford
ROMAN RELIGION: THE IMPERIAL
PERIOD (2005)
- Anne Primavesi
University of London
GAIA (2005)
- Leonard Norman Primiano
University of Pennsylvania
ALL FOOLS' DAY (1987)
HALLOWEEN (1987)
- Stephen Prothero
Boston University
OLCOTT, HENRY STEEL (2005)
- Wayne Proudfoot
Columbia University
PHILOSOPHY: PHILOSOPHY OF RELIGION (1987)
- James H. Provost
Catholic University of America
EXCOMMUNICATION (1987)
- Leo M. Pruden
American University of Oriental Studies, Los Angeles
- KÖBEN (1987)
TIANTAI (1987)
- Michael J. Puett
Harvard University
BONES (2005)
- Reinhard Pummer
University of Ottawa
SAMARITANS (2005)
- Michael Pye
Philipps-Universität Marburg
MERIT: AN OVERVIEW (1987)
MERIT: CHRISTIAN CONCEPTS (1987)
UPĀYA (1987)
- Christopher S. Queen
Harvard University
ENGAGED BUDDHISM (2005)
- Andrew Quintman
University of Michigan, Ann Arbor
MI LA RAS PA (2005)
- Gilles Quispel
Rijksuniversiteit te Utrecht
GNOSTICISM: GNOSTICISM FROM ITS
ORIGINS TO THE MIDDLE AGES
[FIRST EDITION] (1987)
SOPHIA (1987)
- B. Tahera Qutbuddin
University of Chicago
ZAYNAB BINT 'ALI (2005)
- Albert J. Raboteau
Princeton University
AFRICAN AMERICAN RELIGIONS:
MUSLIM MOVEMENTS (1987)
KING, MARTIN LUTHER, JR. (1987)
- Kathryn Allen Rabuzzi
Syracuse University
FAMILY (1987)
HOME (1987)
- Friedhelm K. Radandt
King's College, Briarcliff Manor, New York
HERDER, JOHANN GOTTFRIED (1987
AND 2005)
- Rosemary Rader
St. Paul's Priory, Saint Paul, Minnesota
FASTING (1987)
MENDICANCY (1987)
- D. S. Raevskii
Academy of Sciences of the U.S.S.R., Moscow
SARMATIAN RELIGION (1987)
SCYTHIAN RELIGION (1987)
- Habibeh Rahim
Hunter College, City University of New York
ALCHEMY: ISLAMIC ALCHEMY (1987)
INCENSE (1987)
- Fazlur Rahman
University of Chicago
IQBAL, MUHAMMAD (1987)
ISLAM: AN OVERVIEW [FIRST
EDITION] (1987)
MULLĀ ṢADRĀ (1987)
- Karl Rahner
(deceased)
DOGMA (1987)
VATICAN COUNCILS: VATICAN II
[FIRST EDITION] (1987)
- Jill Raitt
University of Missouri, Columbia
BEZA, THEODORE (1987)
CANISIUS, PETER (1987)
POLITICS AND RELIGION: POLITICS
AND CHRISTIANITY (2005)
- Aaron Rakeffet-Rothkoff
Michlala, Jerusalem
REVEL, BERNARD (1987)
- Lewis R. Rambo
San Francisco Theological Seminary
CONVERSION (1987 AND 2005)
- Velcheru Narayana Rao
University of Wisconsin—Madison
BALARĀMA (1987)
HANUMĀN (1987)
RĀMA (1987)
RĀMĀYAṆA (1987)
TULSIDĀS (1987)
VĀLMĪKI (1987)
- Melissa Raphael
University of Gloucestershire
GENDER AND RELIGION: GENDER
AND JUDAISM (2005)
MENSTRUATION (2005)
PATRIARCHY AND MATRIARCHY (2005)
THEOLOGY (2005)
- Ada Rapoport-Albert
University College London
MAID OF LUDMIR (2005)
- Ravi Ravindra
Dalhousie University
EINSTEIN, ALBERT (1987)
GALILEO GALILEI (1987)
KEPLER, JOHANNES (1987)
NEWTON, ISAAC (1987)